The Stock Market and Its Influences---Merrimon's Amendment.

Money as Usual-The Foreign Market Steady-Government Bonds and Gold Firm.

The possibility of a new issue of inconvertible paper I regard with amazement and anxiety, and, in my judgment, such an issue would be a detriment and a shame. - CHARLES SUMNER.

WALL STREET, THURSDAY, April 2-6 P. M. From the early days of the national government there has always been a fixed and well defined financial policy. For neatly a century the efforts of successive administrations have been directed to the maintenance of the public credit, not merely by the gradual extinguishment of all loans, but by the cancellation of all obligations made for temporary, permanent or special purposes. It has been reserved for the stock jobbers of the Forty-third Congress to set at naught these teachings of history, to walk backward in their reach for honorable results, and to demand a policy that is written all over with repudiation and disaster. The nation is in the hands of political charlatans. The speculater has taken the place of the patriot and the demagogue occupies the seat of the statesman. As a consequence the country is on the edge of a fearful financial crisis. Present facts and past experience, nistory and principle, all have been ignored, and we stand face to face with an expanded irredeemable currency, uncalled for and annecessary, and carrying in its trail such evils as have not been encountered since the fatal hours of

be heard. George Washington said to Congress in 1792:- "The state of the national finances is now sufficiently matured to enable you to enter upon a systematic and effectual arrangement for the regular redemption of the public debt, according to the right which has been reserved to the government. No measure can be more desirable, whether viewed with an eye to its intrinsic importance or to the general sentiment and wish of the nation." In his sixth annual Message, in 1794, Washington again wrote: - "Whatever is unfinished of our system of public credit cannot be benefited by pro-crastination, and as far as may be practicable we right to place that credit on grounds which cannot be disturbed, and to prevent that aggressive accumulation of debt which must ultimately endanger all governments."

Again :- "Whatsoever will tend to accelerate the bonorable extinction of our public debt accords as much with the true interests of the country as with the general sense of our constituents." Finaily, in his Farewell Address, Washington adds:-"As a very important source of strength and secu-

Use it as sparingly as possible, and by vigorous exertions in time of peace discharge the debts which pnavoidable wars have occasioned." President Adams, in 1797, wrote to Congress :-"The consequences arising from the continued accumulation of public debts in other countries ought to admonish us to be careful of their growth in our own case," President John Quincy Adams, in 1827, says :-"I deem it my duty to urge this topic upon the consideration of Congress-of recommending to them the observance of the strictest economy in the public funds." It was only in 1834 and 1835 that the country was entirely out of debt, and at a celebration in nonor of the event President Jackson offered the follow. ing sentiment :- "The payment of the public debt: Let us commemorate it as an event which gives us increased power as a nation and reflects lustre on our Federal Union, of whose justice, fidelity and wisdom it is a glorious illustration." Later, in said, in relation to the financial question :- "The return to a specie basis as soon as it can be accomplished without material detriment to the debtor To protect the national honor every dollar of national indebtedness should be paid in gold, un-less otherwise stipulated in the contract."

Secretary Richardson likewise fairly reflected the views of his illustrious predecessors, when he uttered in his last report the following memorable words:-"Any large augmentation of the issue of United States legal tenders in time of peace would not only be a departure from that declaration of public policy and pledge of the public faith to the national creditors' made in the act of June 30. 1864, as well as from that more solemn pledge contained in the first act of the Forty-first Congress, to make provision at the earliest practicable period for the redemption of the United States notes in coin,' but would postpone the day of specie payments and render it more difficult to attain in the distant future, unsettle confidence in our national finances and be a serious detriment to public credit at home and abroad."

Can any language be more explicit, can any purpose be more plain? Do not the foregoing views illustrate and describe the true financial policy of this government in time of peace? And is there any reason beyond that which is furnished by the speculator to warrant departure from the teachings of these words of wisdom? The possibility of a new issue of inconvertible paper I regard with amazement and anxiety, and, in my judgment, such an issue would be a detriment and a shame. - CHARLES SUMNER.

THE UNITED STATES TREASURY. The price of legal tenders to-day, as compared with gold, is 88 cents. The difference is the tax paid by the consumer. The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $372,284. The receipts from customs were $448,000. The outstanding legal tenders are unchanged. The Assistant Treasurer to-day paid out $20,000 on account of interest and $10,000 in redemption of five-twenty bonds. The Secretary of the Treasury says his receipts for the fiscal year will cover all but the slaking fund, $30,000,000. He estimated for $15,000,000 last month, and from indications he will overron that probably $200,000 or $300,000. The legalization of the $44,000,000 reserve will of course increase the
